Introduction

The African Energy Week (AEW), the African Energy Chamber's annual event that brings African energy leaders, global investors and executives together for four days will be held in Cape Town, South Africa, from November 4 – 8, 2024.

The AEW, an interactive conference, exhibition and networking event, AEW was established in 2021 to work towards making energy poverty history by 2030. It hosts panel discussions, investor forums, industry summits and one-on-one meeting opportunities, and driving the discussions that will reshape the trajectory of the continent's energy development.

According to the organisers, "In 2024, the event returns bigger and better than ever before, serving as the official meeting place for Africa's energy elite. At the forefront of the African energy industry, AEW promotes the role Africa plays in global energy matters, centered on African-led dialogue and decision making. Covering the entire energy sector and value chain, AEW represents the only conference on the continent representative of the entire sector."

It added: "Instead of dwelling on the challenges hindering development, AEW focuses on integration and collaboration to reverse Africa's resource curse and support energy explorers and producers across the continent. When we support upstream, midstream and downstream projects, we support jobs, we create growth, we promote gender equality, and we drive innovation that brings solutions for our future."

Recognizing that the energy transition is shaping the global dialogue, AEW promotes the African position on the future of Africa's energy sector. By advocating personal responsibility, free markets, individual liberty and an enabling environment for investors, AEW ensures that Africa's oil and natural gas industry and Africans stand to benefit, rather than continuing a reliance on foreign aid and assistance."
